

A Clash Of The Titans

Lincoln, NE. — You could have called it "A Clash of the Titans." Third-ranked Penn State and 12th-ranked Nebraska played a game reminiscent of Nebraska's 31-24 win over Alabama in 1977.

This time, though, the Cornhuskers lost, 30-24, to a vastly improved Penn State team, whose product was every bit as good as its promotion.

The Nittany Lions' offensive line and All-American halfback candidate Curt Warner came into the game with rave reviews and left Memorial Stadium convincing all critics.

In 28 carries against Nebraska's punishing Black Shirts, Warner gained a career-high 238 yards, just 12 yards short of a Penn State record set by Shorty Miller against Carnegie Tech in 1912.

Warner's total was 205 yards more than the Nittany Lions netted on the ground as a team last year against Nebraska. Joe Paterno, thus, advanced to a 1-2 record against NU Coach Tom Osborne in the last three years.

Brian Franco proved equally frustrating to Nebraska's 114th consecutive sellout crowd of 76,308 fans. Franco hit all five of his field goal attempts, from 29, 48, 39, 20 and 32 yards out, on a windy day.

His perfect performance broke the Penn State single-game record of four shared by Matt and Chris Bahr, both of whom went on to pro careers.

Attendance: 76,308.

Locker-room Chatter

The Huskers

Tom Osborne, head coach — "I'm embarrassed to be 1-2, but we haven't played a soft team yet. You've got to give Penn State credit. They're about two touchdowns better than the Penn State teams we beat the last two years. The key now is how our team reacts. They could go to pieces or they can buckle down and pull together. On the positive side, our effort was good — certainly better than it was at Iowa. I can't chew the players out for not trying. We just have a lot of things to iron out."

Mark Mauer, quarterback — "I felt good about Coach Osborne coming back to me in the second half. All I need is experience. I need game time. I didn't play particularly well at Iowa, but I learned a lot. I took the loss very personally. I'm trying to deal with the Penn State loss in a different perspective."

Steve Damkroger, linebacker — "I don't read the newspapers, so I hadn't heard of Sean Farrell before the game. But I sure as heck know who he is now. No wonder he's an All-American offensive guard. I hope I never have to go against another All-American the rest of my life. Farrell and his slidekick (Mike Munchak) were tough. I mean, they could block. I've never seen anyone tougher than those two."

Roger Craig, I-back — "It wasn't like we couldn't run against those guys. We just beat ourselves with all those fumbles. Penn State had good team unity. You could hear their defense talk. They wanted this game bad. They came to play. I think they're a national championship caliber team. Maybe we can't win the national championship now. But we've still got the Big Eight ahead of us. That's something to shoot for."

Brent Evans, linebacker — "(Curt) Warner never broke any of my tackles. I never missed him. He's a great back, but its easy to gain a lot of yards when you play behind a great line like that. Penn State was coming to us and you can't play the sweep like that. You have to play the sweep on their side of the field and we didn't do it."

Curt Hinceline, middle guard — "They all played well. They have a class program. Everybody was knocking each other down, then helping each other up. I have a lot of respect for Penn State and I think they feel the same way about us."

The Nittany Lions

Joe Paterno, head coach — "We obviously are a much better football team at this stage that we were when we came out here two years ago, and we were better at quarterback this trip. We're a better football team. Nebraska may be a lot better than it was last year. I don't know. They sure looked awfully good against Florida State. I think we're pretty good, so I think they played tough."

Sean Farrell, offensive guard — "We controlled the line of scrimmage. Our whole offensive line was ready to go. We went into the game with the attitude we were going to win, no matter what it took. There was NO thought of losing. I'm not talking about being No. 1 in the nation or anything like that yet, but on a Saturday-to-Saturday basis, we're as good as anybody in the country. I don't think we can win a national title by playing the kind of football we are right now, but I think we're capable. It's the intangibles that separate the national champions from the No. 2 and No. 3 teams, the things that are done from the heart. I think we can do those things."

Chet Parlavecchio, linebacker — "I think in the first half the game must have turned around nine times. There were times I was sitting there feeling good, and there were times I was thinking: 'Oh, oh' It must have turned around a million times. Those kind of games, you just play for the play. You don't look ahead. You don't look back."

Curt Warner, runningback — "We're basic, not fancy. What we do best is run and come right at you. The last couple of years against Nebraska, it seemed we were always second-and-11 or third-and-15, and we had to pass. It's not that Nebraska was different today. It was more that we were different. We played our game."

Brian Franco, place kicker — "I knew I was going to be used a lot this week, but I didn't think it would be that much. On the first one, I was a little nervous, but after that, I was having so much fun, I really relaxed. I really wasn't thinking about breaking to many records. Every kick that came up, I just wanted to make them. Whatever it takes."

Todd Blackledge, quarterback — "We had two full weeks to prepare for Nebraska and that helped because we were ready for just about everything they had. We came out a small, scared team, but we knew we were supposed to be good and we wanted to prove it. They still hit hard and we may not face a tougher team this year."

Injury Report

Nebraska's 30-24 loss to Penn State was painful, but the injury report was good. The Cornhuskers came out of the physical game with assorted bumps and bruises.

Defensive tackle Henry Waechter reinjured an ankle, quarterback Mark Mauer bruised some ribs and linebacker Jim Corbell strained a knee. All three players, however, are expected to be ready for the Auburn game.

Steve McWhirter, Nebraska's No.1 weakside linebacker who missed all of the Florida State and Penn State games, probably will be sidelined another week or two.

Last week, cartilage was arthoscoped from the knee McWhirter injured early in the Iowa game.

The Way We See It...

Jim Fyffe

sports director, WLVI, Montgomery, play-by-play voice of the 85-station Auburn Football Network (which covers 5 states)

"I'm the world's worst prognosticator because I always predict from the heart and not the head. Auburn is only 1-2 against three fairly weak teams, but I really believe a young defense grew up last week at Tennessee. If Auburn had not run out of timeouts, it would have beaten Tennessee, 14-10, instead of winding up a 10-7 loser on the four-yard line. I know Auburn has not played a team the caliber of Nebraska, but I'm going to say Auburn 12, Nebraska 7."

John Pruett

sports editor, Huntsville Times

"Auburn is a very scrappy football team, but not very talented. They're just too young and too inexperienced to stay with a team like Nebraska. They're still trying to learn Pat Dye's new system. Auburn played Tennessee tough, but they were two lower echelon SEC teams. Nebraska is in a different league. My prediction is Nebraska 31, Auburn 7."

Dave Webber

sports director, WOWT-TV, Omaha

"In three games, I've seen three different Nebraska teams. The worst was at Iowa. The big-play team was against Florida State and the most solid team was against Penn State. I still don't know what the real Nebraska football team is like. The ebb and flow has not revealed an identity. Maybe it will all come together in the Auburn game. I'm looking for a score like Nebraska 35, Auburn 10."

The Huskers Say....

Huskers Illustrated

"This week's matchup brings together a pair of 1-2 teams. But if ever a situation reflected deceiving records, this is it. Nebraska's first three opponents represent perhaps the nation's toughest schedule to this point. Auburn has played three relatively weak teams. To borrow a cliché, the going is tough and the tough will get going. Nebraska 38, Auburn 7." sports director, WSFA-TV, Montgomery (also host of the Auburn Football Review with Coach Pat Dye).

Phil Snow

"Two weeks ago, I didn't think Auburn's chances were very good at all. But it's obvious Nebraska is not the team it hoped it would be. Auburn at least knows Nebraska can be beaten. Auburn also can see itself improving. The offense has to be more consistent and more organized. But the defense might be able to keep them in the game. The defensive players really laid themselves out at Tennessee. I'll say they can do it again. Auburn 15, Nebraska 10."

John Martinez

sports editor, North Platte Telegraph

"This is Nebraska's week to be up. They're in a pattern right now they don't like, so they should bounce back with a vengeance. The talent is definitely there. Once some problems are ironed out, Nebraska will be able to call itself a very good team again. I hope they're not halfway through the season before the problems are solved. I'm going to say Nebraska 31, Auburn 7."

Chuck Stevens

sports director, KLMS Radio, Lincoln (Nebraska's only voting member in the Associated Press weekly college football ratings)

"I still believe Nebraska is a good football team despite being 1-2. I rated them 19th this week because I still believe they're top 20 caliber. No matter who plays quarterback, Nebraska has too much talent and too many guns for Auburn. The Tennessee score was not impressive, considering how badly Tennessee had been clubbed in their two previous games. I can see a real mismatch, Nebraska 49, Auburn 0."

Coach Osborne's Evaluation

For the first time since 1960, Nebraska stands 1-2 going into its fourth football game of the season. The Cornhuskers play Auburn, which is also 1-2, this Saturday in Memorial Stadium.

Cornhusker head coach Tom Osborne isn't ready to toss in the towel, however. "We've got to come back. It's just a matter of pulling us together. If you're good enough, you'll come back," he said.

For instance, the 1969 Nebraska team, for which Osborne was an assistant coach, lost two of its first four games — 31-21 to USC and 17-7 to Missouri — but "ended up with a 9-2 record and had a very good football team," said Osborne.

That NU team began a 32-game undefeated streak which carried through two national championship seasons.

According to Osborne, this year's rugged non-conference schedule has made it difficult to get sufficient game experience for the three quarterbacks battling to win the starting job. For instance, he says he would have liked to play sophomore Turner Gill against Penn State, but "it's so hard to use three quarterbacks in a tough ball game because nobody can get the feel of the game. I just wish we'd get some breathing room."

"This is the worst year I can remember as far as having three tough games back-to-back, to start the season. We've always had an easy game or two in there," Osborne said, adding: "Being 1-2 is really tough on morale; this is a really tough time, but now we'll find out what our players are made of."

"They can go one of two ways. They can look ahead and try to get better, or they can start pointing a finger and saying 'It's not me.'"

Osborne said his team gave a good effort against Penn State, despite the 30-24 loss, and as a result, "there won't be as many changes (in the lineup) as there was after the Iowa game."

Senior Mark Mauer will start at quarterback against Auburn, with junior Nate Mason back at No. 2 after starting the Penn State game. Gill remains No. 3, and Osborne indicated junior Bruce Mathison isn't completely out of the picture.

Osborne said he would have stayed with Mason longer against Penn State, but some fumbled exchanges between Mason and the Husker I-backs forced the switch to Mauer.

Even so, "It wouldn't be fair to stick Turner in front of Nate (on the depth chart) this week. I feel good that both Mark and Nate have taken quite a few snaps now this season, and when either one of them is in there, it's not like we were starting all over, the way it was at Iowa," said Osborne.

Some of Nebraska's problems with Penn State were due to a Nittany Lion offensive line which is considered one of the best college lines in the country. The rest was related to the "health" of Nebraska's interior defensive line, a continuing concern for the Osborne.

The Cornhuskers' top three defensive tackles — Henry Waechter, Toby Williams, and Dave Stromath — all have been slowed down, Waechter and Stromath with injuries and Williams with a liver ailment. According to Osborne, none of the three tackles is much more than "75 to 80 percent" healthy right now.

"Auburn's offensive line is a little like Penn State's, and they've got a 240-pound fullback. They do a good job on offense. We've got to get healed up," he said.

The Tigers lost a tough game to Tennessee last Saturday in Knoxville, 10-7.

With 5:16 remaining, Auburn began a drive from its own 20-yard line which carried to the Tennessee 4. With no timeouts left and only 11 seconds on the clock, freshman quarterback Ken Hobby dropped back to pass but fumbled the ball and time ran out.

Auburn opened its season with a 24-16 victory over Texas Christian University before losing to Wake Forest, 24-21.

Osborne said Nebraska's offensive line play against Penn State was much better than it was in a season-opening loss to Iowa, even though the Nittany Lions were "a little like Iowa in that they gave us a lot of pictures. They didn't have to show a lot against Cincinnati in their opener (a 52-0 victory), and they did some things we hadn't seen."

"But for all the jumping around they did on defense, I thought our offensive line was able to adjust and do a good job," said Osborne.

Nebraska's offensive problems were confined, primarily, to an inability to hold onto the football early in the game. The Cornhuskers fumbled six times and lost three in the first half. "If we could have taken care of the ball, we might have scored 30 or more points and gained 420 to 430 yards," Osborne said.

"When you go out and play a good team and make four or five turnovers, there's a good chance you're going to lose." Before the Penn State game, Nebraska's goal was to be "plus-2" in turnovers. Instead, the Cornhuskers were "a minus-2," he said.

Delivery Problem?

We at the Huskies Illustrated understand how frustrating it is to not receive your Weekly Update before each game. It is for this reason we incur excessive charges and put in long hours immediately after each game and each Sunday following the game to insure the fact that all printing deadlines will be met. Meeting the printing deadline enables us to mail your Weekly Update by priority, second class mail each Monday night and early Tuesday morning following each game.

If these schedules are met, and we have not missed one, the Post Office officials assure us that all in-state subscribers will receive their Weekly Updates on Wednesday and the out-of-state subscribers will receive theirs no later than Thursday.

If you happen to be one of the few subscribers who are experiencing delivery problems, we ask your assistance. First, call your postmaster and explain that these Weekly Updates are mailed to you no later than Tuesday by Second Class Priority mail from Lincoln, Nebraska. Ask for his help. In exchange for this favor, we'll assure you that on this end we will meet our deadline and alert postal officials along the way to the problem.

Then if all else fails, you may wish to try First Class mail. The cost is $7 and will entitle all eleven Weekly Updates to be mailed first class. We will start the service upon your request and it will continue into next season until you have received the eleven issues with First Class handling.

We ask for your understanding until the Postal Service gets back to 100 percent operating capacity, and until then GO HUSKERS!

Special Notice to New Subscribers

You are holding one of the weekly-updates issued by Huskies Illustrated. You will receive 11 of these updates, one before each regularly scheduled game. In addition to these 11 weekly updates you will receive 9
